Mr. Coots wants the material on the ground by the first of May at the latest. He is under bonds to have his part of the building completed by the first of January, 1991, and in order to comply with this requirement, must have the granite ready to be put in place very early in the building season next year. Unless the Dodlin people agree to have the granite for the building on the ground here by the first of next May Mr. Coots will ask the council to either change the material for some other grapite that can be delivered promptly or else extend the time allowed him for completing his contract.

andervoort, it is said, has been chinging to the skirts of members of the council for several days in an effort to have the diffi-culty settled in some way that will save him from losing his Dodin commission.

The matter will come up in some shape at the council meeting on Tuesday night.

The Contest for Judgeship is Warm ing Apace

The statement published Thursday in ref-thing of a breeze among politicians and law-ing. I was surpised at his informing me that he was a canondate for the place. "It was at the solicitation of the friends of Mr. Ambrose and other candidates for the judgeship that a petition was circulated re-questing a bar meeting. There was no intimation in any way pledging the per-sons who took part in the meet-ing to stand by the result. It was only called for the purpose of suggesting a person who should be a republican, to the republi-can convention as a choice of the bar for the judgeship. On the first ballot there were 330 votes cast, of which Mr. Estelle received 66, Mr. Davis 51 and Mr. Clarkson 70, the balance scattering. On the third ballot Davis, with a vote of 49, was withdrawn. Upon the fourth ballot 194 votes were cast, of which Mr. Clarkson received 110 and Mr.

NEW LUMBER SUPPLIES, The Abundant Timber Product of

Washington and Oregon. the development of the pine forests of the southern states is a surprise, that of the great timber belts of red and vel low fir, sugar pine, cedar, hemlock and spruce in Washington and Oregon is equally so, says the St. Paul Pioneer-Press. That vast, far northwestern development of the lumber interest is something which few people east of the Rocky mountains, who are not connected with the lumber trade, have properly appreciated; few have read its significance. Until recently it has generally been held that Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota are abundantly able to meet the demand for nothern pine for an indefinite period. The idea of the Puget sound saw milis supplying lumber to points far east of the Rockies was not considered within the range of probability a few years ago. The forests of the three contiguous central states exhausted, Canada was looked upon as the future source of supply. But the tremendous output of the Pacific coast mills has already found a market over the Rockies to the Missouri river and eastward. Colorado and Wyoming, Kansas, New Mexico, Nebraska, during the past few years, have taken no small amount of lumber, shingles and tim-bers from Puget sound. Some bridge timbers have been shipped, indeed, as far as St. Paul, and Pacific coast shingles are sold in large quantities in Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and Ohio. In the last three or four years the Pacific coast producers have steadily labored to make a large market for their product from the Rockies to Lake Superior. Large amounts of capital have been invested in saw mills and logging operations on the Pacific and the output is far beyond the large local demand; millions of feet are shipped constantly to South America, and the big trees continue to yield lumber piles sufficient to supply the country to the Mississippi valley and the lakes. While we talk of a thirty years' supply of white pine in Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin, we must not forget that the demand is likely to be doubled or trebled by reason of the rapid settling up and development of the two new states west of Minnesota and by the quickened growth of the latter state. The Northwestern Lumberman of Chicago, referring to the growth of the cific coast lumber industry, says: If fir, cedar and redwood are to make rapid strides east of the mountains, it will be because the railroads shall foster such movement by low freight rates, and sellers shall thus be able to compete successfully with the two pines. Without doubt as the coast lumber industry develops, and the pressure of product on the market increases, the railroad companies will see it to be their interest to afford all possible transportation facilities and at lower rates than now prevail. In the future, also, competition between rival lines will increase, for the Manitoba system is striking out for the north Pacific coast, and the Chicago & Northwestern for a point on the coast in Ore-gon. It is likely that within the coming five years the systems named, as well as others, notably the Chicago, Mil-waukee & St. Paul and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, will have constructed lines that shall touch the western ocean. These, should they be built, will enter into competition for the eastern lumber trade.

It is thus possible that the coast product may, in less time than we are now contemplating, become a powerful competitor with the two pines in the prairie interior, simply as a result of encouragement tendered by the railroads. It is likely that throughout the region between the Missouri river and the mountains the coast lumber trade will make much more rapid progress than furtner east. The long haul is certainly not an irremovable barrier to the ambition of the Puget sound men. Some of the shrewdest of the white pine men admit that in a few years rates will be reduced sufficiently to make a margin of prefit for the Puget sound mill men on eastern shipments. In Oregon and Washington there are about four hundred stationary saw mills and over one hundred shingle mills at work upon the vast areas of big trees. In Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin there are 1.532 saw mills and about 700 shingle mills cutting away at the white pine forests, which are not The two Pacific states posrenewed. sess forest areas which have scarcely as yet been seriously touched by the ax. That region can supply the northern tier of states to the lakes when the white pine is annihilated, if that time ever comes, and can diversify the supply if it does not.

No Meeting Held Yesterday as Announced-State House Gossip-The News in General.

LINCOLN BUREAU OF THE OMAHA BER, LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 18. Barney Burns, a Hoosier, alighted from he train this morning at the Burlington

A few days since he resolved to take Gree ley's advice and go west and grow up with the country, and thereupon "gripped his duds" and started.

Now, Barney is not an ordinary-looking guy, but a sharp appearing fellow, though wholly unused to the ways of this big, wicked world. Shortly after alighting from the train he ran upon a gentleman who gave his name as Woods, and they soon scraped up an acquaintance. Woods was delighted to learn that Barney was going to Denver. He, too, was bound for the same destination. The old, old story follows. They walked the streets together until near time for the departure of the west bound train. Suddenly Woods remembered that he had some goods that must be paid for and trans ferred, and the check racket was worked Barney willingly cashed it for its face, $51, and Woods soon made himself scarce. Burns, aided by the police, looked in vain for his new found friend. He took the matter philosophically, however, and having sufficient money to pay his fare through to his destination he departed on the 4:15 train this afternoon for his original destination.

The Board of Transportation.

Chief Clerk Holmes, of the state board of transportation, gave it out Thursday that there would be a meeting of the board today, Friday, and that this coal and cattle rate matter would come up for consideration or revision. This was a little incomprehensible, as it was understood that the order made Tuesday was a peremptory and final one. Inquiry among the members of the board to-day developed the fact that not one of the gentlemen knew anything of the meeting except what they had read in The BEE this morning. The chief clerk was visited again to-day and asked concerning it, and especially how this coal rate question ould come up when the action taken Tues-ay was final. He replied very day was final. He replied very promptly that the meeting for to-day was an adjourned meeting from Tuesday; that there was no meeting Tuesday on account of there being no quo-rum; that Commissioner Steen came in, and after waiting some time adjourned the moeting until to-day. When he was asked how it came that the papers all printed an account of the Tuesday meeting and the making of the dual order in the Southerland-Manning complaints, he said he did not know how it got out—he knew of no meeting or that kind being held on that day. Just then Secretary Glichrist came in and said: "Yes, there was a meeting Tuesday, and here is a memoranda of the proceedings just as I made them at the time "October 15, 1889, board met; present Hill.

Benton and Steen. Absent, Laws and Leese; secretaries instructed to issue per-emptory order to all railroad corporations transporting coal in the state of Nebraska to reduce the coal tariff to the following uni form schedule: Initial and terminal charges Me per ton; I cent per ton per mile for the first fifty miles, etc."

Mr. Gilchrist further explained that Chief Clerk Holmes was absent a portion of the cay on leave and that propably accounted for his not knowing of the meeting; that the meeting was held as he had stated; that it was an important one and that there would be a record of the same in accordance with his memoranda; that this was absolutely necessary, as if the board attempted to enorce its order in the courts it would run against a snag unless the record showed that such an order had been made. There was no meeting of the board this afternoon.

grand larceny, has been continued until October 25. The boy's father is a deputy sheriff at Wilber, Saline county, and is mak ng a desperate effort to save his son from the pen. The case of Charles Weatherby, charged clothing house, has also been continued until James Howard, a railroader, started out with $175 last night, bent on painting the city red, and came up minus the entire sum. He save he was robbed in a dive on the bottoms kept by a man by the name of Cox. He swore out a warrant for the arrest of Cox with robbing Nellie Roberts and the Globe and two other men, as usual, John Doe and Richard Roe. Judge Field issued an order this morning authorizing Richard Cunningham to dispose of sixteen acres off the west side of the eightyacre tract near the Wesleyan university owned by Richard Glenn, who was nounced insane a few weeks ago. This was done to prevent the foreclosure of a mortage given by Glenn.

Alfred Irwin brought suit in the district court to-day against Bertha and Otto H. Dogge to foreclose a mortgage of $3,500 on property at the corner of Sixteenth and P streets. This is a fight between the late regitors of the Herold estate and a lawyers, who are playing for the biggest share of the spoils.

The Hibernian Dance. Division No. 3, Ancient Order of Hibernians, makes a success of everything it undertakes and its dance in A. O. H. hall Thursday evening was one of the grandest successes ever scored by that excellent fraternal lodge. The committees, in fact every member was a committee, made more than personal and committee efforts to entertain their guests and everyone seemed to do only to make a wanted success. Shelany's orchestra furnished music and J. M. Schenck spread the cloth for 100 couples, Adding to the interest of the dance was the
